ABSTRACT

This profile of counties in Oregon covers factors that may predispose youth to grow up at risk of dropping out of high school or not acquiring the skills needed for adult life. The profile presents data on human resources and educational and economic indicators that were collected from state agencies and organizations. For the state as a whole, and for each county, information is expressed in terms of state or county incidence and as percentages of the state or county population. The following data are provided: (1) the number and percentage of children aged 0 to 5 years by race or ethnicity; (2) human resource indicators, such as state incidence of children through 5 years of age who are in substitute care, receive preventive or restorative services, or are victims of child abuse or neglect, and the incidence of low birthweight births, inadequate prenatal care, teen pregnancies, complete immunizations, juvenile arrests, and aid-to-dependent children cases; (3) school-related indicators, such as early intervention services, free or reduced-cost lunches, students in special education, and the school dropout rate; (4) economic indicators, such as the unemployment rate, the poverty rate among 0-5 year old children, the average number of households that receive food stamps, the number of economically disadvantaged residents over 14 years of age, unmet needs for low-income housing, and per capita personal income; and (5) health resources, including the numbers of hospitals, nursing facilities, residential care facilities, medical doctors, dentists, nurses, and other medical practitioners. Data sources are listed. (AC)

FOREWORD

This report has been prepared to provide a profile of each Oregon county with respect to selected factors which may predispose youth to grow up at risk — at risk of not completing high school or of not entering adult life equipped with the skills necessary for independent and self-sufficient living. In developing the report, selected factors which alone or in combination with others are often associated with at-risk children and families were identified. Subsequently, human resources, educational, and economic indicators of those factors were specified and the related data were collected from appropriate state agencies and organizations. This information forms the bulk of the report.

Supplemental information related to the indicators also was collected and is reported here. Health resources in each county are listed as well as the 1991-93 Great Start Priorities identified by the county Children and Youth Services Commissions. Pertinent census data for children ages 0-5 years is also included. A complete listing of the sources of all information and further explanation of the indicators themselves is found in Appendix B. Unless otherwise noted, all data is for 1990.

While the information provided herein is both important and useful, the reader is urged to interpret the data and draw conclusions cautiously. No attempt has been made to assign statistical significance to the data nor to identify potential implications. The raw data presented in this report constitute a first step in assessing the needs of children in each of the counties. Further refinement of the data coupled with qualitative information will permit meaningful interpretation.

APPENDIX B

Explanations and Sources of Information

Data Presentation: The information gathered for this report was supplied in varied formats. To achieve a uniform presentation of the information, it was necessary to transform some of the data to fit the reporting framework. In some instances, slight variations in data may have resulted from rounding of numbers.

County Ranking Procedures: For each indicator, counties have been ranked from highest to lowest percent of county cohort with the exception of per capita income, completed immunizations, and the percent of eligible Head Start students served. These three indicators are ranked from lowest to highest. Ranks are based on percents rounded to the nearest tenth of a percent. Where two or more percents are equal, the "ties" are dealt with by averaging adjacent ranks.

County Population Data: Population figures are based on U.S. Census figures (April 1, 1990) provided by the Center for Population Study and Census, Portland State University.
